"In a time when God's voice was rare, young Samuel learned how to listen. Guided by Eli, he discovered that God speaks not only through extraordinary signs but also in the ordinary moments of life. This sermon calls us to recover a sense of enchantment—to be still, open Scripture, and lean into wonder—so that we can truly hear the Lord's voice. Listening re-imagined means reading scripture without agenda, learning from mentors, embracing awe, and trusting that God continues to speak into our everyday lives, shaping us into people who follow with humility and obedience.

In today's world, where trust in people and institutions often feels fragile, God's voice remains steady and true. His Word cuts through noise, cynicism, and doubt, offering us guidance we can depend on when everything else seems uncertain."
