Called for This Time
Nehemiah 2:1–8, 17–18
Following God into the Unknown

God often moves His people forward not by giving a complete plan, but by revealing the next faithful step. In Nehemiah 2, God calls a cupbearer—an ordinary servant, not a builder—to step into a God-sized task. Nehemiah risks everything by asking the king for permission to rebuild Jerusalem, trusting God with courage rather than certainty. When the vision becomes clear, Nehemiah doesn't act alone; he invites the people to join him: "Let us rebuild." God's work is always shared.

This message reminds us that God still calls everyday people—commuters, caregivers, retirees, children, singles, and servants of all kinds—to participate in His ongoing story. Faithfulness doesn't require having all the answers, only obedient trust. The work God has begun in this church is not finished, and the ongoing engagement with this mission needs everyone working together.
