

But he was pierced
for our transgressions,

He was crushed
for our iniquities:

The punishment that brought us
peace was on him,

and by his wounds
we are healed.

Journey to the Cross
The Point of View
2 Corinthians 5:11-19

On this Easter Sunday, we are reminded that the resurrection of Jesus doesn't just change our future—it transforms how we see people right now. In 2 Corinthians 5, Paul declares that we no longer view anyone "according to the flesh." The cross doesn't simply improve our perspective; it replaces it entirely.

Because of the cross, we see humanity not as people to reject, but as people in need of redemption. Sin no longer creates categories—it reveals a shared condition that only Christ can heal. The same grace that reaches the worst of sinners is the grace that has reached us.

Through Jesus, God has given us the ministry of reconciliation. We are not called to judge or define people by their behavior, but to meet them at their need—with truth, discernment, and hope—refusing to let sin have the final word. In Christ, we are new creations. And if we have truly received God's grace, it will reshape how we see others. The distance God has placed between us and our sin becomes the same posture we extend toward others.

Easter declares this powerful truth: because God refused to see us according to our sin, we are now called to see others through the lens of the cross. And that changes everything.
