The Testimony of Laughter in the Face of Goodness

Genesis 18:9–15; 21:1–7

Years of disappointment had taught Sarah to lower her expectations. Worn out and unable to imagine how God's promise could be fulfilled, she laughed in disbelief. Yet God's faithfulness was never limited by Sarah's age, her circumstances, or the possibilities she could calculate.

When Isaac was born, the meaning of her laughter changed. What began as a private expression of doubt became the joyful testimony she shared with others: "God has brought me laughter." The very situation that once made God's promise sound laughable became evidence of God's surprising goodness.

This story does not promise that every delayed desire will receive Sarah's outcome or that every sorrow will be resolved as we hope. It does remind us, however, that our ability to imagine a future does not determine God's ability to remain faithful. What disappointment has caused you to expect less from God? Bring that "basket of impossibility" into God's presence and remain open to the unexpected ways his goodness may yet be revealed.
